

PLOWING NEW GROUND IN THE SIXTH INNOVATION WAVE

Buying Time for the Next Big Move

Innoviz Technologies (NASDAQ: INVZ) was founded by a team of engineers formerly with an elite technology unit out of the Israeli Defense Forces – a launching point for over 50 startups over the last decade.

The company went public through a SPAC deal back in April. The market cap at the time was a bit steep, but it's backed off about 30%, and at $7 per share, the valuation is reasonable.

I consider Innoviz a buy-and-hold stock. It's still pre-revenue, and it could take some time for Wall Street to take notice.

You can buy the stock. But consider buying the warrants instead. That way you can truly magnify your exposure while also buying time for the stock to really make its move.

Warrants are like a long-dated call option with an exercise price of $11.50. They don't expire for 5 years, and each Innoviz warrant (NASDAQ: INVZW) allows you to buy one share of Innoviz stock at $11.50.

And to give you an example of how powerfully warrants can magnify returns, should the stock hit $20 per share, each warrant will be worth at least $7.50. They currently trade at $1.64 which means you can make a 357% return – at a minimum – on a 185% move on the stock. And when the stock hits $30, the gain climbs to over 10X.

Strategies like this are an excellent way to amplify your prosperity as Innovation Wave #6 climbs higher and faster than anything we've seen before.

Disclaimer: No financial advice is given or implied. Publisher is not a registered investment advisor or stockbroker. Information provided for educational purposes only.

Trading involves risk of loss and may not be suitable for everyone. You should carefully consider whether trading is suitable for you in light of your age, income, personal circumstances, trading knowledge, and financial resources. Only trade with money you can afford to lose. There is no guarantee that you will profit from your trading activity. Past performance is no guarantee future results.